The Gas Company Tower

555 West Fifth Street
Los Angeles, California 90013

Designed by Richard Keating of Skidmore, Owings and Merrill, The Gas Company Tower is one of the most unique buildings in the DTLA skyline. Offering over 1.3 million net rentable square feet, the tower was completed in 1991 as the second building in the Library Square Redevelopment Project (US Bank Tower is the other). 50 Stories tall, this tower is a rare example of a building designed to suit its anchor tenant, Southern California Gas Company.
